

Abstract

The present invention relates to a dental insertion element for use in the oral cavity, which insertion element is characterised in that it has a cross-sectional area having a non-circular periphery.